

of bamboo, or food belonging to any of these people, shall practise a Chandr&yanam. A Brahmana, having unknowingly drunk water out of a Chandala's well-cup, shall practise a Santa* panam. A Kshatriya and a Vais'ya, under the circumstances, shall respectively practise a half and a quarter Santapananu

A S'udra, under the same circumstances, shall practise a quarter Ch&ndrdyanam. Having unknowingly taken any food in the house of one of a vile caste, a Brahmana shall regain his purity by practising three Krichchha Praias, while a S'udra, under the circumstances, shall practise a Parakam penance. A Brahmana having partaken of the residue of the meal of a member of vile caste shall regain his purity by practising a Chandrayanam^ while having drunk water in the house of a low caste person a Brahmana shall fast for six nights (Sind Ratram.) A Kshatriya having unknowingly partaken of the food of a Ckanddla shall practise a Santapanam, while a Vais'ya and a S'udra^ under the circumstances, shall respectively practise the Shadritri and Triratri penances. A Brahmana having unknowingly eaten a fruit, while seated on a branch of the same tree with a Ckanddla^ shall regain his purity by fasting for an entire day and night.

A Brahmana happening to touch a Cfyandala^ before washing his face, after eating a meal, shall repeat eight thousand times the Gdyatri, or a hundred times the Drupada Mantra.

Having eaten the food of a Chanddla or S'vapacha, or that which has been defiled by the touch of excreta, 'a Brahmana shall practise a Trirltram penance, the expiation for the members of other castes, under the circumstances, being the performance of a Paraka Vratam. Having wantonly visited a woman, a man shall practise a Paraka penance by way of expiation. No expiation exists for one, sprung of a vile caste, under these circumstances. A Brahmana, having drunk water out of a cup which contained wine, shall regain his purity by practising a quarter Krichckha Vratam^ and by getting himself reinitiated with the holy thread* Brdhmanasj who haying